

NUNGESSER AND COLI STILL LOST RUTH AND GRAY WAIT DEATH 200 DEAD IN TORNADO AREA

TWISTER BRINGS DEATH AND PROPERTY DAMAGE TO HALF-DOZEN STATES

Missouri, Arkansas And Texas Hardest Hit—Poplar
Bluff, Mo., Reports Heaviest Loss—
60 To 70 Dead There

CHICAGO, May 10.—Two hundred dead, several thousand injured and property damage that will run into millions—

Such was the approximate toll compiled here today of the freak wind and rain storms that did a weird dance of death over a half dozen middle and southwestern states late yesterday and last night.

Missouri, Arkansas and Texas were the hardest hit, the estimated dead in these three states reaching a total of 175.
A score more were killed in Kansas and Illinois.

Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana and Oklahoma also felt the storm's wrath and sustained heavy property damage. No loss of life has been reported from these states. Violent wind and rain storms were reported as far west as Colorado and Wyoming.

Poplar Bluff, Mo., and several small towns in Arkansas and Texas reported the heaviest loss of life. Between sixty and seventy were reported dead at Poplar Bluff, with several hundred injured.
Four business blocks and much of the residential district were laid in ruins by the death-dealing twisters.

The little towns of Egypt and Strong, in Arkansas, reported eight and twenty dead respectively.

FARMERS REFUSE TO EVACUATE FARMS IN FLOOD STRUCK AREA

Women And Children
Leave But Men Ignore
Warnings

NEW ORLEANS, May 10.—With the flood waters of northeastern Louisiana already washing over the Bayou Des Glaisses levees, relief agencies of the state were confronted today with the refusal of thousands of farmers in the threatened parishes south of the levee line to heed the evacuation warnings issued a week ago when engineers declared a break in the bayou dikes to be inevitable.

Women and children have left the four hundred square miles in Avoyelles, Pointe Coupe and St.
Landry parishes, immediately beyond the wave-washed dikes, but throughout the entire region men remain behind with their cattle and crops apparently assured by more than 200 years of flood history in central Louisiana that their lands are immune from the devastating waters.

For more than twenty-four hours wave-wash has been spilling over the river walls at several points along a thirty-five mile stretch.
From four to six feet of water is rolling down from the inundated northeast quarter of Louisiana but still these grim old planters stubbornly turn their backs upon the north, upon the publicly displayed evacuation warnings of the state relief director, and upon widespread rain fall throughout the lower valley which today added millions of cubic feet of water to the oncoming flood crest.

They have been told daily, almost hourly, since Friday that the forty mile inland lake which is northeastern Louisiana today must be released upon their fertile fields.
Either they do not believe that such disaster could befall the picturesque American birth place of colorful creole traditions and customs, or they have doggedly elected to take their chances with the waters when they rush in upon the thriving farms and quaint villages.
The Bayou Des Glaisses is the sole and fragile barrier that stands between the flood waters of the northeastern parishes and the rich cotton and sugar lands of the south.
When the danger of inundation of the southwestern parishes from a possible crevasse in the Des Glaisses Atchafalaya system of dikes first became apparent, warnings were sent by telephone, telegraph, courier and later by radio to the residents of the entire section, to take their household goods, farm equipment and livestock and, leaving merely a rear guard of men to work on the levees to flee to safety at once. These warnings fell upon the ears of a people who have fought floods for generations.

Precautions Taken To Prevent Woman From Suicide
—Gray Eats Good Breakfast And Seeks
Solace In Prayers

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y., May 10.—Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder who, with her lover, Henry Judd Gray, is to be sentenced next Monday to death in the electric chair, was today in a state of collapse.

The woman who had been called the "icy blonde" because of her cold self-possession for days in court lay semiconscious in her cell in Queens County Jail, suffering from the effects of a hysterical spasm that was diagnosed by physicians as an epileptic fit.

She broke down completely last night when a jury returned verdicts of guilty against her and Gray for the murder of her husband, Albert Snyder, in her home on March 20.

"Oh, my God!—I never thought that followed her conviction. Physicians summoned to her cell found her unconscious, her jaws tightly set. It was with difficulty that her hands were unclenched.
Consciousness returned after an hour and her condition then became highly nervous.

Justice Townsend, Sunday by law must sentence both Mrs. Syder and Gray next Monday to die in the electric chair within six weeks from the time of conviction. As soon as this formality is gone through the slayers will be taken in a clattering conveyance to the death house in Sing Sing.

Each of them, however, is entitled to an appeal. This appeal au-tomatically stays carrying out the death sentence until the seven justices of the court of appeals pass upon the case.

HOW GRAY-SNYDER LOVE PACT MOVED TO CLIMAX

The progress of the Snyder-Gray affair, traced from its beginnings to its climax in Queen's County courthouse, is as follows:

Gray began intimacy which ended in murder of Albert Snyder.
Week of March 13, 1927—Snyder said by mother-in-law to have threatened wife with hammer.
March 17, 1927—Gray spoke with Mrs. Snyder by telephone from Syracuse.

Snyder home in Queen's village.
March 20—Gray and Mrs. Snyder decided early in morning upon the murder of the editor. Deed accomplished as he slept. Police became suspicious and arrest Mrs. Snyder, Gray having returned to Syracuse.

ing Gray. Gray is arrested in Syracuse and brought to New York.

COAST GUARD BEGINS COMBING SEARCH FOR MISSING AIRPLANE

French And British Warships May Join Search—
Hope Dwindles For Safety Of Intrepid
French Aces

NEW YORK, May 10.—A combing search was begun today over the North Atlantic for Capt. Charles Nungesser and Capt. Francois Coli, French aviators who disappeared while trying to make a non-stop flight from Paris to New York.

It has been more than fifty-five hours since the aviator in the "White Bird" took off from Paris early Sunday morning to try to span the Atlantic in a single hop. This morning the men and their plane were still missing, although during the past twenty-four hours Europe and America had been thrilled a half dozen times by false reports that the French machine and its venturesome occupants had been sighted of the American coast at various points.

United States navy coast cutters and ocean going tugs are engaged in the hunt over the storm tossed, fo-bound reaches of the North Atlantic along the steamer line followed by ships in their northern passage to and from European ports.

It is understood that French warships and possibly British warcraft will join the search, thus making a great international quest for some vestige of the missing airplane.

Disappearance of the Nungesser plane makes the second recent tragedy on trans-Atlantic flights.

Capt. Saint-Roman, another French aviator, who tried to fly from the African coast to the South American mainland, dropped somewhere during the flight and he has been missing since last Thursday.

Chiefly by reason of bad weather off the American coast hope has dwindled for the safety of Nungesser and his companion.
Thick mist and high winds have prevailed off the coast of the Canadian maritime provinces in the path of the route that Nungesser planned to pursue. The thick weather added a double element of danger. Even if the machine dropped into the Atlantic and remained afloat it would be difficult for searchers to see it through the murk.

Before leaving Paris Nungesser spoke of the possibility of mishap that would force him down into the ocean. He said this contingency did not alarm him because he believed the plane would float for two or three days and he hoped that, if accident overtook him, he would be picked up by a passing ship.

Nungesser carried only fuel to keep his plane in flight when he left Paris and experts pointed out that he was probably compelled to use more petrol than he had counted on because of the adverse winds encountered in mid-Atlantic.

Aviation experts did not overlook one possibility. They pointed out that Nungesser and his companion might have been picked up by a fishing boat off the Grand Banks and under such circumstances would be unable to communicate with land because of the lack of radio facilities.

Through out the night radio stations along the United States and Canadian coasts kept in touch with steamships hoping to get some word of the missing aviators.

Four powerful searchlights at Sandy Hook—the entrance to New York harbor—kept their beam swinging restlessly through the foggy air all night as a beacon.
There was little hope that Nung-esser could reach that far on his limited supply of petrol, but the precaution was undertaken as a sort of "last resort" measure.

The Bellanca Monoplane Columbus in which Lloyd W. Bertraud and Clarence D. Chamberlin plan a non-stop flight to Paris is all in readiness. But weather condition have been so bad the past thirty six hours that they are postponing their departure. There is a possible chance, however, that they may hop off tomorrow morning.

PARIS, May 10.—Hope for Capt.
Charles Nungesser, France's foremost aviator, died hard and slow ly today.

National gloom over the tragic disappearance of Capt. Nungesser and his fellow aviator, Capt. Francois Coli, at sea, was deepened when officials of the air ministry admitted that they had received no word up to 10 o'clock upon which hope might be based.

SPRING HILL P-T. A. ELECTIONS OFFICERS

Thirty-five members attended an interesting meeting of the Spring Hill P-T. A. Monday afternoon and witnessed a program by school children.

Pupils of the first grade received the prize of a victrola record for having the most mothers in attendance at the meeting.

At the business session, a balance of $185.24 was reported in the treasury.

Newly elected officers were also installed by the two past presidents, Mrs. John Babb and Mrs. Fred Snyder. They are: Mrs. Louis Clark, president; Mrs. James Savage, vice-president; Mrs. Hugh Barnes, secretary; Mrs. Walter Watkins, treasurer, and Mrs. Homer Mansfield, publicity secretary.

In another unique feature of the program, seven girls represented the word "service".

Following the installation of officers, the new president presided over the meeting. The mite box collection amounted to $1.70. Plans were laid for a covered dish supper for the latter part of May in honor of the school teachers.

MCKINLEY P-T. A. HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING

Mrs. L. C. Landaker was elected president of the McKinley Parent-Teachers' Association at the annual organization meeting in the auditorium of the school Monday afternoon. She will succeed Mrs. Karl Short as head of the branch. Other new officers are: vice president, Mrs. J. P. Lytle; secretary, Mrs. G. C. Donohoe; and treasurer, Mrs. Marjorie Douthett. Mrs. L. S. Hyman served as secretary of the society for the current year and Miss Ollis Hart was treasurer. Miss Hart read her annual report as treasurer.

Miss Mildred Sandoe, Greene County librarian, gave an interesting talk in which she explained the work that is now taking place at the library, setting it in readiness for the work in the county library district. She also talked about methods of teaching children to use the library.

SPRING VALLEY H. S. SENIORS TO GIVE PLAY

The senior class of Spring Valley township high school will present the play "Cyclone Sally" in the high school auditorium, Friday evening, May 13. The play, by Eugene Hoyer, is an uproarious comedy in three acts. Miss Catherine Norgle, of New Burlington, will take the part of Sally Graham "Cyclone Sally," and Harold Hartsock of Spring Valley will take the leading man's part "Jack Webster," owner of the Webster estate. There are nine characters in the cast.

Mrs. Abe Hyman, N. King St., is a patient at the Miami Valley Hospital, where she is undergoing treatment, having been in ill health for some time.

The Misses Margaret and Helen O'Brien of Hill St., who spent the last seven months in Los Angeles and other parts of California returned home Monday night.

Mrs. L. S. Hyman spent Tuesday in Cincinnati on business.

Members of St. Agnes Guild will meet at the parish house of Christ Church Wednesday at 2 o'clock. The time will be spent in sewing on aprons for the sale to be held soon, and a good attendance is desired. Miss Sarah Hagar and Mrs. A. C. McCormick will be the hostesses.

Mr. Paul Galliger, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Galliger of Leeman St., will be among the graduates at St. Joseph's College, Connersville, Ind. this spring. The commencement exercises will take place early in June.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Norckauer, E. Third St., are in Cincinnati, spending several days there in order to be with their daughter, Miss Rose Antoinette Norckauer, a nurse at the Good Samaritan Hospital, who is convalescing after an operation for appendicitis which was performed last week.

Easy to check Catarrh NOW!

Many endure catarrh because they do not know how easy it is to end it. Salves and ointments give only temporary relief. Catarrh is too deep-seated for them to reach effectively. To end catarrh you must treat the inflamed mucous membranes—the delicate linings of nose, throat and head. When these are again in a healthy condition, catarrh, and catarrhal deafness disappear.

To do this use Hall's Catarrh Medicine. Thousands have found it most effective for over 40 years. Ask your druggist. Price 85c. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

ARTHUR BUCKLE'S BRINGS SUIT FOR $4,530 AGAINST AUTOISTS

Arthur Buckles, 71, S. King St., paper hanger, has begun suit in Common Pleas Court against Ernest Bull, R. R. 5, and Mrs. Maud Dixon, 106 Rogers St., for $4,530 damages, based on alleged permanent injuries received in an auto accident on King St., March 24. Buckles was pushing a push cart north on King St., enroute to work, and was on his extreme right-hand side, when struck by an auto driven by Mrs. Dixon after it had collided with a car driven by Harold Bull, 15, son of the defendant, Ernest Bull, according to the petition.

The petition declares Mrs. Dixon was driving west on Union St. and Bull was operating a truck south on King St. Mrs. Dixon, it is charged, did not slacken the speed of the car in approaching the intersection, in defiance of a "slow" sign, a police regulation.

Plaintiff says he did not know whether it was her intention to continue her course west on Union or to turn south on King, but

ARREST XENIAN FOR ASSAULT; IS BOUND OVER HERE TUESDAY

Karl Keller, 24, this city, for whom Montgomery County deputies have been searching in connection with a report he fired two pistol shots at Lester R. Grieve, R. R. 2, Xenia, on the Fairground Road while Grieve was driving along the highway Sunday night, was arrested by police. Patrolman Fred Jones made the arrest.

Keller pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault proffered by Grieve before Mayor John W. Prugh Tuesday morning and was bound over to the grand jury under $200 bond.

Grieve told police he had parked his car along the road and was accompanied by a girl in the machine, when Keller's auto, containing another boy, drove alongside. Grieve drove down the road and heard two pistol shots, he said. Keller's car then passed by and one of the occupants pointed a pistol with a command to stop. The girl screamed and jumping out of the car, ran down the road. A fight between Keller and Grieve ensued.

Probate Judge S. C. Wright ruled Tuesday in confirming an order of G. H. Smith, commissioner of insolvent, and making permanent the discharge of the quartet from jail. The four convicted liquor law violators, who are the first in Greene County to take advantage of the recent state supreme court ruling, are: Fred Harris, 24, colored, 934 Brewster St., Detroit, Mich.; Bennie Lewis, 43, colored, 623 E. Church St.; Agnew White, 26, colored, 616 E. Second St.; and Earl Cline, 21, 103 Bellbrook Ave.

The decision, in effect, holds that to imprison a man for non-payment of a fine is in fact imprisonment for debt in violation of constitutional provisions, if the prisoner is insolvent and unable to pay the fine. Under the insolvent debtor's law they could not be held longer than sixty days.

The four obtained certificates of insolvency from the insolvency commissioner April 7, and were granted temporary releases without bond pending a final hearing before Judge Wright, who has added his affirmation to the commissioner's order.

"TOYS" AND INVENTIONS

It was not so long ago in the annals of science that a technical journal published an article about a Mr. Edison, an American, who had invented an electric lamp. The article described the invention as "a toy lamp" and assured the owners of gas and oil wells and candle works that illumination by electricity would never come.

Another of these "toys" is the telephone. Many still living were among those early scoffers who only fifty years ago laughed at the prediction that men would some day talk to each other through a strand of wire. Even after the first telephone conversation the public looked upon the device as a toy for the amusement of Alexander Graham Bell and other scientists.

And now some authorities regard the television as no more than a toy with which electrical engineers may amuse themselves. Some of its sponsors make no promises that it will become a part of the everyday life of this present and living generation. But the public, guided by past experience, has assumed an attitude of watchful waiting. The non-scientific citizen has that much confidence in the present day scientist he believes anything is possible.

Television may not write a great new page in the social and industrial history of the world, but it will be well for doubting prophets to beware. Their cue should be the progress already made with this remarkable device, the development of radio and long-distance telephoning, and the practical use now being made of the invention by which photographs are transmitted across continents and oceans by telegraph.

BABY CARS

There isn't much demand for baby buggies any more, says a furniture dealer. It used to be that every furniture store had to carry a line of such vehicles, ranging in price all the way up to $150 apiece. Every baby just naturally had to have a buggy.

Now there is only an occasional call for one, few are kept in stock, and parents are unwilling to pay the old prices, the limit being about $50.

It isn't so safe and easy to wheel buggies around as it used to be, with autos whirling around every corner and stop-and-go signs at the crossways. Also the babies' taste has changed. Or else the mothers have changed it for them.

The baby now has to take its airing in a motor car. That pleases baby and mother both, and father himself doesn't seem to mind much. It's surprising how much this infantile demand has to do with the present market for automobiles.

Little Old New York

NEW YORK, May 16.—Antique dealers are fancy even if the place is straight. They've taken to what they call the Decorative Art League, adopted a nice, new, shiny code of ethics, and are asking the collectors of cobwebs and fractured furniture to let bygones be bygones and start all over again.

Henceforth if you step into one of these Sap Salons and purchase a Looie Quince ice cream freezer that subsequently turns out to be an Etruscan cuckoo clock, you may go back to the Book Bazaar and get redress, satisfaction, vindication and your money.

The "You-Can't-Win" posters plastered over the city by the police a year or so ago for the edification and admonition of the denizens of the underworld, are beginning to bear fruit.

Shoot an arrow in the general direction of Hall's kitchen and it sometimes drops with a dull, sickening thud on someone's front step on Park Ave.

Walking west on Fifty-ninth St. from Columbus circle, the massive front of the Paulist church is hidden by the Ninth Ave. elevated station. All that is visible of the structure are the turrets, the Cross and part of the roof.

Back of the church, an office building has been erected and a dentist on one of the upper floors has hung out a sign that from a distance looks as if it were part of the church. First the Cross, then the turrets, and finally the black-lettered announcement: "We Specialize in Gold Crowns."

Patrick Leo Francis, known and honored among the membership of the Forty-second St. and Broadway Country club as "Jack" Francis, has perhaps as wide a knowledge of the eccentricities of Madia Lane as any man living. The change that has come over Nedick highway, however, in the last few years, has been too much for the genial raconteur, so that every once in a while he runs head-on into an experience that leaves him gasping.

One evening last week he dropped into Silvio's to partake of some Smithfield Virginia ham. Silvio specializes in that viand and Brother Francis is passionately fond of the dish.

Silvio's, it may be stated in passing, is not the spiffiest ham house on Bulb boulevard. The waiters roam round in aprons that have undergone a post-graduate course in utility. The towels they carry over their massive arms are dyed and discouraged. But the

KELLYGRAMS BY FRED C. KELLY

Beware of compromises half way between two men's ideas of human behavior. They were all off key.

"The Barker," by Kenyon Nicholson, the best play and one of the most amazing pieces of realism I have seen in many a month. Even the minor characters are flesh and blood folks right from life.

At the same time I read reviews by various critics praising a new play "The Second Man," by S. N. Behrman. Each the author of a hit, had collaborated on a new play called "Love is Like That."

Then a few days later I noticed Messrs. Nicholson and Behrman, each the author of a hit, had collaborated on a new play called "Love is Like That."

With two men like that working together, I reflected, we should have a whole of a good drama and performance. But I found that I had let myself in for one of the stupidest, most artificial plays I have had to sit through in years.

Now, why, should two clever dramatists, after writing successfully alone, make such a sorry mess of the job when they work together?

My guess is that they made too many compromises. Instead of having the full say about what should go into the play or be left out, each co-author probably tried to be polite and show respect for his associate's views. These compromises naturally resulted in situations not real or truthful but

Many Minds SIGNIFICANT SAYINGS OF THE DAY

"I am sorry that women have been brought into the House of Commons. I am still more sorry that women have been admitted to juries. The plain fact is that men and women cannot be brought together in association without either attracting one another or irritating one another."—Lord Hugh Cecil.

"The danger of suggestion, while its results have always been realized, is rendered much more acute by the coming of the tabloid newspaper which reaches strata of population which never read newspapers in former generations. The power is great, especially where persons of subnormal intelligence are concerned. Accounts which they read of crime impress them to a greater extent than their more intelligent brothers and the flood of crime news which flows from the modern press gives sinister inclinations to minds that would otherwise be occupied with very harmless interests."—Report of the New York state crime commission.

"Whether a man or a woman has had any higher education or not he can be both informed and intelligent. How? Books! Information comes largely from books, and intelligence is aided by good books. Education of the widest sort can hardly be achieved apart from books."—Charles Francis Potter.

"A democracy which refuses to do political thinking is digging its own grave, and particularly is this true when in the midst of a prevailing prosperity and surface quietness. Deep and fundamental forces are at work which, possibly sooner than we think, may find expression in political acts and facts which will be constructive or destructive, progressive or retrogressive, according as the people shape and direct them."—Gov. A. C. Ritchie, Maryland.

This condition is an exceedingly common one and as it is sometimes a matter of great importance it is a good plan to know something about it. The term implies that indican is present in the urine. Now indican can always be found in the urine if the test used is sufficiently delicate and when it is present in considerable quantity it becomes a matter of decided significance.

Indican is a dark blue substance resembling indigo and is a product of indol which is formed by the decomposition of proteins in the intestine. Indol is absorbed into the blood and oxidized and when combined with sulphur it becomes indoxyl sulphate which is the chemical expression for indican.

It is always due to putrefactive changes with fermentation resulting from bacterial action and more frequently in proteins derived from animal matter like meat, fish and eggs than from vegetable proteins.

It is separated from the blood in the kidneys and so becomes a constituent of the urine.

When it is absorbed in abundance its poisonous action is indicated by headache, irritability, insomnia, and other symptoms which show interference with the blood and nerves and it is thought by some to have an influence in producing arteriosclerosis and chronic inflammation of the kidneys.

It is quite possible that the symptoms mentioned are not due to indican alone for other poisons are found with it when decomposition of these are also absorbed into the blood stream.

It is one of the products developed in connection with chronic constipation, or obstruction from any cause in the small intestine, or from suppurative, with decomposition of pus in any portion of the body.

Its formation is encouraged in those who eat large quantities of meat or eggs or who commit errors of diet in many ways, in those who do not take sufficient exercise, whose habits are sedentary, whose digestive secretions are insufficient and who are subject to nervous troubles of various kinds.

Indican is also excessive in many of those who suffer from liver diseases, super-acidity of the stomach and ulcer of the stomach and duodenum.

Those who have epilepsy and those who have inflammation of the bladder are also sufferers in many instances from indicanuria.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS S. E. T.: 1. Would there be any bad effect from taking two tablespoons of paraffin oil daily for sixty days? 2. I have been using a patent hair tonic for scalp dandruff on my scalp, but my hair seems to be getting thinner. What would you think of it? Answer—1. I suppose you mean mineral oil. This is not absorbed, but passes through the intestine and is discharged unchanged. If you are using a good preparation it ought not to do you any harm. Many people use it for constipation for an indefinite period without harm and with good result. 2. If your hair continues to come out it would seem to me that the preparation is not helping you. Why not try something else.

Mrs. W. L.: Please tell me what I can do for constipation from which I have suffered five years. My ten-month-old baby is also very constipated, and each of us has to take a laxative every night.

Answer—For these obstinate cases of constipation there is nothing much better, that I know of, than mineral oil. There are several good brands of it which may be obtained at any first-class drug store, and the beauty of it is that it can usually be taken for an indefinite period or as long as it may be required, without harm. It is not absorbed from the intestines, but simply loosens up the intestinal contents and gives them a push.

SONGS of a HOUSEWIFE by Marjorie K. Rawlings

REMINDERS

The wrens and robins nesting, The cries of fledglings faint, Remind me that our cottage Must have a coat of paint.

New puppies and new kittens And fluffy chicks, new-hatched, Remind me that my youngsters Must have some clothing patched.

The apple trees are budding, The cherry blooms appear— And all these things remind me I need new shades this year.

I'm sure you'll understand this, If, like me, you've been blind To things that needed doing, 'Til Spring slipped up behind!

POSTPONE HEARING ON LIQUOR CHARGES

Hearings of George Holstein and John Locke were set for Thursday morning by Judge S. C. Wright after the pair pleaded not guilty to charges of possessing liquor in Probate Court Monday.

Holstein's bond was fixed at $800 and Locke's at $1,500. The former will have his hearing at 10 a. m., immediately following Locke's trial at 9 o'clock.

They were arrested by Kenneth C. Barr on a farm on the Union Road Saturday after tin cans containing five gallons of liquor had been found in a clump of bushes. Holstein operates a junk business on Whiteman St., and Locke is employed by him. The two were arrested about a week ago by police on liquor charges. The case against Holstein was dismissed while Locke was fined $200 and costs, a part of which has been paid.

ANTIOCH COLLEGE BOARD ADOPTS NEW PLAN

AUTONOMOUS STUDY SYSTEM IS RADICAL SCHOOL DEPARTURE

Taking one of the most progressive steps in the history of college education, the Antioch College board of trustees, at its annual meeting in the college offices Monday afternoon, approved the adoption of the autonomous plan of study for the Yellow Springs institution.

The new plan, providing for a reduction in class room work and putting the student almost entirely upon his own initiative, will be put into effect with the opening of the first semester of the 1927-28 college year in September, according to President Arthur E. Morgan.

The student, under the latest and more advanced system of education, is not required to attend regular classes and the daily recitations are abandoned. He is permitted to handle the subjects alone as long as possible before conferring with faculty members for any assistance and to get the instructor's point of view.

The plan has been worked out on a smaller scale at the college and after almost five years of experimentation, college officials feel the time is opportune to place the system on a more advanced scale.

Students will submit to regular examinations every five weeks and the trustees also approved adoption of a comprehensive examination for students at the end of the college course, covering all subjects studied. This detailed examination requires a thorough knowledge of all work taken up while at college. The course is normally for six years but a majority of students have been able to complete it in five years, President Morgan says.

A full program of work will be mapped out for next year.

The trustees received and approved the contemplated budget for next year.

Work of the past year was also thoroughly reviewed by the board, which found the co-operative plan of study at the college is progressing satisfactorily. Payerable progress was reported for the art, bronze, foundry, which makes bronze busts for sculptors, for the Antioch Press, which is now printing "Antioch Notes" and other college publications, and for the shoe research project.

Announcement was made by President Morgan at the meeting that the purchase price of $17,500 for Antioch Glen, to which the college has had title for some time, has been donated by Mrs. Armstrong, Erie, Pa. The gift includes about 105 acres of land.

Strengthening the college faculty, the trustees also approved four new department heads. They are: Robert Hiller, of the chemistry department; Dr. Liddle, of the department of English; Dr. Mathieson, of the department of psychology; and Dr. Horace English, also of the department of psychology, who resigned two years ago to become attached to the department of psychology at Wesleyan University in Connecticut. He was formerly professor at Antioch in charge of this department.

The 1927 graduating class of the college of fifty-three students, for whom commencement exercises will be held next month, was approved at the meeting.

It was disclosed that there were about 400 contributors to the college during the year. Of this number, the largest gift announced at the meeting, was made by Allen Balch, of California, of $10,000 each year for general school purposes. Mr. Balch is not connected in any way with the institution but is deeply interested in the work, it is said.

1917, when she and her husband moved to Dayton.

For many years Mrs. Gerlaugh was prominently identified with the work of the W. C. T. U. in Greene and Montgomery Counties. She served for a time as treasurer of the Montgomery County branch. She was interested in religious and educational work as well and in 1924 went abroad, attending the world's Sunday School convention at Glasgow, and touring the continent.

She was a member of the Emerson Literary Club of Dayton. She was an official organizer of the Miami Conference missionary branch of the United Brethren Church, having served in that capacity for nine years. During that time she organized eighteen missionary societies in local churches of the conference, eight of them for women and ten for girls. She was one of the first residents of the branch, and a pioneer in organizing young women's work. She was a member of the East Dayton U. B. Church and held many official positions in the church.

Mrs. Gerlaugh is survived by her daughter, Mrs. Kundert; two brothers, L. A. Scott of Shandon, O. and A. J. Scott of New Haven, and a sister, Mrs. Azilia Detweiler of Uniontown, Pa.

Funeral services will be conducted at the East Dayton U. B. Church Wednesday at 2 o'clock, and the body will lie in state at the church from 11 o'clock.

ADMITS AUTO THEFT FOLLOWING ARREST NEAR XENIA MONDAY

Ralph Connors, arrested by Kenneth C. Barr, county road patrolman, on the Jasper Pike Monday afternoon, confessed to Sheriff Ohmer Tate the theft of a Ford coupe from a man named Sweetzer, Mt. Healthy, O., last Sunday.

The officer noticed the unoccupied car parked along the road, and,

investigating, found Connors asleep in a barn nearby.

Questioned by the sheriff, Connors originally claimed to have purchased the car and that he procured license plates at Eaton, O. He said he was en route to Chicago, Ill.

Sheriff Tate traced the license plates through the auto club at Cincinnati and found they were issued to the Mt. Healthy resident. He communicated with the mayor of that city and it developed the car had been stolen last Sunday. Connors then admitted the theft.

He will face a probable charge of grand larceny and will be prosecuted in Cincinnati.

FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

The Rovin' Ritzies By Flo Frederick

THE PARTY'S BEGUN
AND OH! WHAT FUN
"I have the best plans for our pirate feast!" cried Betty Ann, bursting into the little carpenter shop, where Patsy and the three boys were busy working on the invitations and the treasure hunt scroll for their party.
The Ritzies were going to entertain the neighborhood boys and girls with a pirate party and tell them all about their newly-organized club. Their plans were well under way when Betty Ann, the youngest Ritzie, came dashing in to the little carpenter shop (which served as headquarters for the club, with plans for the pirate feast.
"If Marty can cut some small wooden slabs here in his shop, we will serve the food on them in true pirate fashion," she said. "We will use mugs for milk and barn and back lawn looked like a pretty dangerous place for peaceful people to venture. Daggers, black mustaches and high-topped boots were there aplenty.

When all had assembled, Captain Hank (which, of course, was Marty in disguise, announced that it was a peaceful mission that had called them together. His crew had heard of some booty, but they were unable to trace it down. They were willing to share the spoils if their pirate friends could find the buried treasure. Marty then presented the visiting pirates with the map which he and the twins had carefully worked out the day before.

This started the treasure hunt, with the five members looking on from the upper deck (the loft window). When the pirate chest was at last unearthed (it was really at last unearched) it was filled with wooden spoons and kitchen knives and forks for utensils.

"Mother is going to cook an extra amount of mashed potatoes for lunch and keep them steaming hot in a double boiler until we are ready to serve. These and the baked beans we will bring out on the slabs of wood. We can take up a collection for cookies and the feast will be complete."

"Three cheers for Betty Ann, the food queen!" shouted Marty, and they all joined in the chorus.

With the treasure hunt planned, the invitations written and the food problem solved, there was little else to do except get the pirate costumes together. Attics were ransacked for bright-colored ties to be used as sashes, and old felt hats that could be turned up in front in real pirate fashion.

Ho! Ho! for the Treasure
Marty, as leader of the pirates, wore a wide ribbon sash across his chest that told in red letters that he was Snarling Captain Hank.

The day of the party they were indeed a hard-looking crew. When the guests started to arrive, the beads and trinkets of all kinds, the spoils were divided and each guest given a trinket to take home.

The pirate feast finished off the party, and while they ate off the wooden slabs and drank milk from the pirate jugs, Marty and his comrades told the guests about their new club.

"If this is a starter of what all your parties and stunts are going to be like, I will be mighty glad to attend the Rovin' Ritzie affairs," said one boy, and he seemed to express the sentiments of the neighborhood.

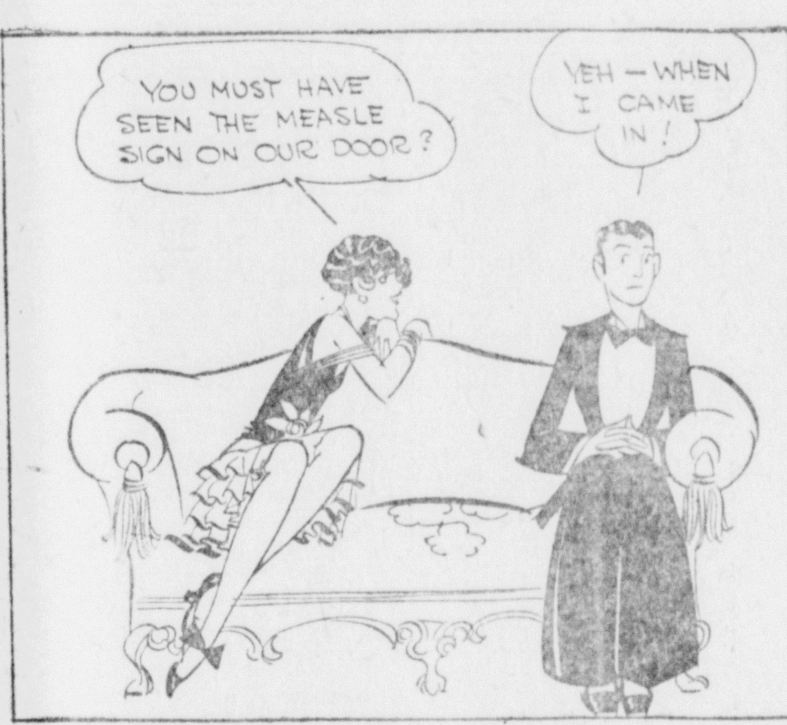

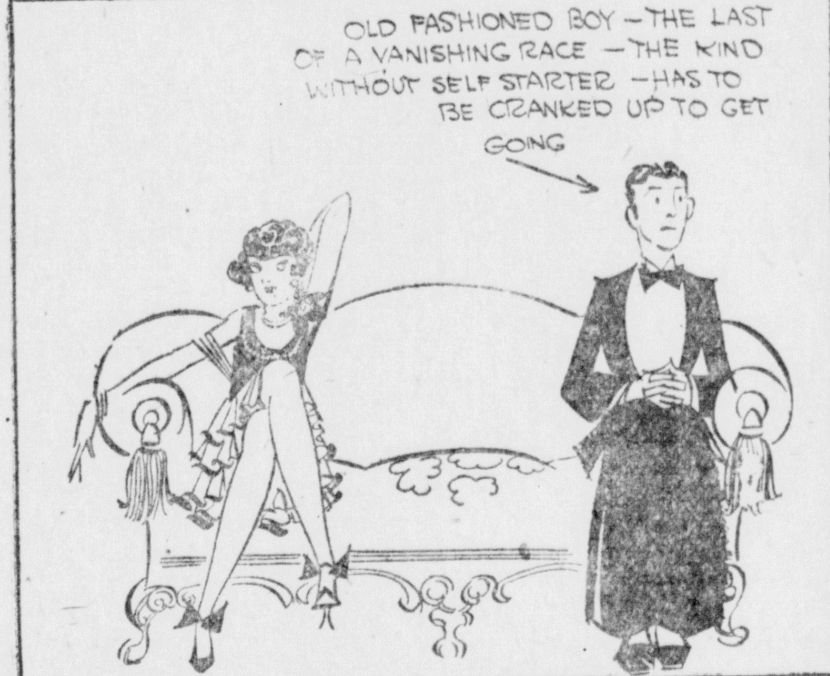

This same party can be given by any club or neighborhood group or by a single boy or girl. If you missed last night's story, which told about the invitations and the treasure map, you can get an extra copy of the Evening Gazette at the office of the Evening Gazette.

Follow the suggestions of the Ritzies and your party will be a real success. If you live in an apartment, you can use the basement for the pirate ship instead of a garage.

STATE UNIVERSITY MAY KEEP STUDENTS FROM USING AUTOS

COLUMBUS, O., May 10.—Ohio State University students will be "out of luck" if President George W. Rightmire takes drastic action on the traffic situation and forbids automobiles to be driven on the campus.

For unlike Illinois and Princeton, where autos have been banned, facilities for roller skating to school are not exactly first rate.

When students were forbidden to drive cars to school at Illinois and likewise at Princeton, the undisciplined drivers took to the roller skates and glided to school on the smooth streets and sidewalks.

Owing to aged and cracked asphalt streets, the cobblestone sidewalks and cinder paths which prevail on the campus, it is highly probable that Ohio State students will not be able to fall back on the childhood means of transportation.

Prexy Rightmire has refused to make a statement regarding his action on the matter but his decisions in the weekly traffic court have been trending toward some definite change in the traffic laws.

Eight students, on charges of breaking the speed or parking rules set by the university, were recently given two weeks suspension from the institution by Rightmire.

The traffic conditions have he promises expiation from the university to violators who become so acute that the Prexy come constant visitors in the weekly court.

My Son's Sweethearts

WHAT HAS HAPPENED:

Philip Wynne Tracy IV brings Natalie Jones to his home in the car. His mother has just given him and tells her they are going to Arrowhead Inn. He stays very late and when he does come home tells his mother that he has proposed to Natalie and hopes to marry her before leaving for college.

Mr. Jones, who is the Tracy's milkman, objects to Philip quite as much as Mrs. Tracy objects to Natalie.

Philip's mother unconsciously interests her son in a woman who is coming to visit her and will stay for the party she is going to give for him. Without his mother's knowledge, Philip plans that Natalie shall come to the party with Rodney Maxwell and then goes to meet his mother's friend, Mrs. Hilliard, at the train. She flirts with him as though he were a grown man. He takes her to luncheon and suddenly finds that he is in love with her—a woman much older than himself.

In the meantime Rodney takes Philip's message to Natalie and she does not believe it comes from his mother.

During their first dinner together at his mother's table, Lydia Hilliard and Philip secretly hold hands—Here the story further unfolds—

CHAPTER XI

LYRA MAKES COMPARISONS

From the evening of that dinner Philip Wynne Tracy IV only lived for the touch of Lydia Hilliard's beautiful hands—only saw the shifting light that turned her brilliant eyes from gold to black—only heard the sounds of a tender, caressing voice speaking his name—everything else was forgotten. He counted the days by the minutes that he had passed by her side.

After the invitations had been sent out, his friends, being well bred young people, called upon his mother and his mother's friend. That is, all of them called except Natalie.

One evening six of them dropped in at the same time and he proposed that they should take up a rug and dance to the victrola.

This was hailed with great joy by every one, the young people being a little shy in the presence of Mrs. Hilliard.

Naturally the couples first paired off together as they had come, and to his great delight his mother said: "Son, ask Lyra to dance—she still likes it."

He stood before her and she lifted her eyes to his. He caught again that wistful childish expression he had surprised in her the first day. Oh, how could he comfort her?

For a moment her eyes wandered about the floor where the twinkling feet of three couples were already dancing, and then, as she slowly came into his arms, she whispered: "Don't ever forget, dear Philip, that there is absolutely nothing in this world but youth. Love it, appreciate it, keep it as long as you can, for afterward—there can be nothing but regret."

Philip could not answer.

He could only sense that, light as thistledown, he was holding the woman in his arms who made all the other women shadows.

His fantastic fancy did not last long, for the other young men had already perceived that Lyra Hilliard was quite the best dancer in the room, and at the end of the record they rushed with one accord to engage her for the next dance.

When he was perfectly sure that he must give her up to some one of them, he asked Luella Carr to be his partner, but was quickly sorry that he had done so, for she began immediately to ask questions and make comments.

"I HAVEN'T seen you with Natalie Jones lately. Is she out of town, Phil?"

"I'm not sure. I don't know—I have not seen her lately myself," he answered in a tone which he hoped would make her understand that he did not like to talk while dancing.

"Well, I'm glad, Phil, that at last you have seen that it would be impossible to foist Natalie upon the girls of our set. Of course, it didn't matter so much when we were younger, but I thought the other night at Arrowhead when you were going to try and make us receive her now that we are grown up."

"I don't know, Luella, what you are talking about. Natalie Jones and I have been chums ever since we could talk, and as for me foisting her on any one, I think even I would find that impossible if Natalie did not want to be foisted, even if it were perfectly agreeable to you. With both of you against it, I certainly should know better than to butt in."

He stopped abruptly as he realized that he was fighting Natalie's battle with surprising vigor for a person who had treated her in the way he had lately, and who probably, in the near future, was going to humiliate her in a way that she had never been humiliated before.

Luella had noticed his tone and she answered: "Well, you needn't get so high hat about it, Phil. Then

He could only sense that, light as thistledown, he was holding the woman in his arms, who made all the other women shadows.

In her usual manner she changed the subject as quickly as she had begun it.

"Tell me about this lady that's dancing her head off with Jack. I wonder if she does not know yet that time has ruled her off the tracks?" Having won a ribbon or two at the horse show, Luella thought it smart to occasionally give her conversation a sporty flavor.

"I just hate those females," she continued viciously, "who, because they still remain thin and can put on their rouge artistically, think they can fool us younger ones to whom the world belongs. They only fool themselves."

"She seems to be fooling Jack. Killebrew all right. Look at him now—he is dreaming that he is on a nice shipwreck cloud dancing with a radiant golden angel made for his special benefit."

Luella Carr missed a step in the dance.

"By the way, Luella, do you think it's just the thing to accept my mother's invitation, come into her home, and viciously attack her friends? Of course, I know that Jack has been your abject admirer for so long that one can hardly blame you for having an attack of blind stagers when you see him absorbed by any other woman."

"Well, I must say Phil I am heartily sick of that lady. I don't care if she is your mother's friend. Jack has not talked of any one else since that day you all lunched together. I think it was the first day she came. Honestly, I wouldn't have come over here at all tonight but I saw if I did not he would be badly peeved. A girl soon learns that she must play up to a man's moods."

THE record and Luella ran down together. Philip was glad of that, and he also drew a sigh of relief when each of the other two boys had danced with Lyra and the party broke up.

"I think I'll go out for a little spin," he said to his mother as the last guest passed the door. "Those cigarettes that Jerry Kenyon smokes, coupled with Luella Carr's heavy perfume, made me feel rather yellow."

"Oh, is that it?" exclaimed Mrs. Hilliard. "Would it bother you, Phil, if I went with you? You don't care, do you, Anne? My head is feeling badly, too. It is too bad that the roadster won't hold the three of us."

"Oh, I wouldn't do such a crazy thing under any circumstances," said Mrs. Tracy. "Of course, I wouldn't stop you from doing it if you wish to go, but I am sure a good sleep for both of you would be better than skulking around the city in that roadster. Sometimes, Philip, I am almost sorry I bought it for you."

"No, you're not, Mumsy, you only think so once in a while. You've always tried to make me happy, you know, and you have never given me anything which pleases me so much as that little blue roadster."

"Well, good night, Anne—we'll not be gone long," said Mrs. Hilliard. "I know I'll sleep better for having a breath of fresh air."

She wrapped herself in a big fur coat, the high collar of which only left her gleaming eyes to be seen and they seemed to widen with the expectancy of a child as she stepped into the roadster.

Neither of them spoke. He because he was so happy, and she because she was so sad.

All the evening she had been inexpressibly depressed by her contact with those young people. Lyra Hilliard was one of those women, of which this world seems to be pretty full, who do not understand themselves and therefore are the more dangerous.

She thirsted for the youth which she saw rapidly speeding away from her until it had become an obsession. She tortured herself by keeping young people about her as much as possible, not to enjoy their freshness and their new viewpoint of life, but because she was always trying to contrast them with herself or rather hoping to find out how little contrast there was between them and herself.

SHE was continually trying to cheat herself, looking in every mirror, glancing in every eye to see if they still held the image of her youth.

All of her great effort was in trying to hold her own with the new generation which was springing up beside her and she was becoming very tired.

Perhaps if Lyra Hilliard had borne children her whole nature would have been changed, for even her greatest enemies—and she had many—never doubted for a moment that she had a wonderful understanding and appreciation of the viewpoint of youth, even if she used it selfishly to provide herself a little longer with a capacity for youthful folly.

She was particularly unhappy tonight, for she knew unerringly that not one of those young girls who had paid so little attention to her had been fooled in the slightest by her assumption of youth. They all, however, had acknowledged her charm and had unconsciously arranged themselves against her. She was sure that Luella Carr had voiced something of this kind to Philip just as she knew by an undefinable expression in the eyes of the others that they thought she was poisoning.

True—she was perfectly aware that she invited this, but that did not keep the knowledge from rubbing salt into the raw wounds of her vanity.

She looked at the boy beside her and wondered of what he was thinking. She had not noticed that he had stowed up the car beside the road which, on the one side, was lined with trees and that now were stripped of their leaves, while below, on the other side, the moon was making paths of silver on the broad Hudson.

The car came to a dead stop.

What will come of this moonlight rider? Phil is feverishly infatuated with Lyra and she, in turn, is infatuated with youth. Find what happens in tomorrow's installment.

TWISTER BRINGS DEATH AND PROPERTY DAMAGE TO HALF-DOZEN STATES

Missouri, Arkansas and Texas Hardest Hit—Poplar
Bluff, Mo., Reports Heaviest Loss—
60 To 70 Dead There

CHICAGO, May 10.—Two hundred dead, several thousand injured and property damage that will run into millions—

Such was the approximate toll compiled here today of the freak wind and rain storms that did a weird dance of death over a half dozen middle and southwestern states late yesterday and last night.

Missouri, Arkansas and Texas were the hardest hit, the estimated dead in these three states reaching a total of 175. A score more were killed in Kansas and Illinois.

Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana and Oklahoma also felt the storm's wrath and sustained heavy property damage. No loss of life has been reported from these states. Violent wind and rain storms were reported as far west as Colorado and Wyoming.

Poplar Bluff, Mo., and several small towns in Arkansas and Texas reported the heaviest loss of life. Between sixty and seventy were reported dead at Poplar Bluff, with several hundred injured. Four business blocks and much of the residential district was laid in ruins by the death-dealing twisters.

The little towns of Egypt and Strong, in Arkansas, reported eight and twenty dead respectively.

FARMERS REFUSE TO EVACUATE FARMS IN FLOOD STRUCK AREA

Women And Children
Leave But Men Ignore
Warnings

NEW ORLEANS, May 10.—With the flood waters of northeastern Louisiana already washing over the Bayou des Glaisses levees, relief agencies of the state were confronted today with the refusal of thousands of farmers in the threatened parishes south of the levee line to heed the evacuation warnings issued a week ago when engineers declared a break in the bayou dikes to be inevitable.

Women and children have left the four hundred square miles in Avoyelles, Pointe Coupee and St. Landry parishes, immediately beyond the wave-washed dikes, but throughout the entire region men remain behind with their cattle and crops apparently assured by more than 200 years of flood history in west central Louisiana that their lands are immune from the devastating waters.

For more than twenty-four hours wave-wash has been spilling over the river walls at several points along a thirty-five mile stretch. From four to six feet of water is rolling down from the inundated northeast quarter of Louisiana but still these grim old planters stubbornly turn their backs upon the north, upon the publicly displayed evacuation warnings of the state relief director, and upon widespread rain fall throughout the lower valley which today added millions of cubic feet of water to the oncoming flood crest.

They have been told daily, almost hourly, since Friday that the northeastern Louisiana today must be released upon their fertile fields. Either they do not believe that such disaster could befall the picturesque American birth place of colorful creole traditions and customs, or they have doggedly elected to take their chances with the waters when they rush in upon the thriving farms and quaint villages. The Bayou des Glaisses is the sole and fragile barrier that stands between the flood waters of the northeastern parishes and the rich cotton and sugar lands of the south. When the danger of inundation of the southwestern parishes from a possible crevasse in the Des Glaisses Atchafalaya system of dikes first became apparent, warnings were sent by telephone, telegraph, courier and later by radio to the residents of the entire section, to take their household goods, farm equipment and livestock and, leaving merely a rear guard of men to work on the levees to flee to safety at once. These warnings fell upon the ears of a people who have fought floods for generations.

Walnut Ridge, Ark., reported sixteen killed and 125 injured, with fifteen of the latter expected to die.

In Texas, the towns of Garland, Nevada, Tipton, and Coleto, all in the northern part of the state,

CHICAGO, May 10.—Close to 200 persons met death in five storm-stricken states yesterday and early today, according to incomplete reports received by International News Service. Reports showed the following death totals:

Missouri 78.
Arkansas 62.
Texas 35.
Kansas 10.
Illinois 8.

were visited by the freak twisters. In the four towns thirty-five persons were reported killed and more than 100 injured.

Two Red Cross trains were dispatched to Poplar Bluff, Mo., from St. Louis as soon as news of the disaster reached that place. Red Cross Director P. H. Burns was in charge. The trains carried doctors, nurses, tents, blankets and food supplies.

Aid to the stricken sections of Arkansas, still suffering from the devastating floods that recently ravaged the state, was being rushed from Little Rock, according to word reaching here today.

POPULAR BLUFF, Mo., May 10.

—Fifty-four bodies had been removed today from the tornado wreckage in the business section of Poplar Bluff, it was officially reported, but those directing the rescue work said they feared many more dead would be found beneath the debris still to be reached.

As relief workers held a meeting this morning to perfect their organization, it was announced the main problem confronting them was emergency feeding and medical care. A temporary food shortage has resulted in the destruction of the business district but this is not expected to create a critical situation as supplies of all kinds are being sent from other points.

The number of injured being cared for in the Lucy Lee Hospital, the main high school building and the churches, is estimated in excess of 200.

Arrival of a Red Cross train from St. Louis and supplies from the nearby towns relieved the shortage of medical supplies.

SECOND JURY PANEL SUMMONED IN TRIAL OF ALLEGED KILLER

Tentative Jurors Are Seated For Floyd
Streitenberger

CANTON, O., May 10.—A second panel of sixty prospective jurors had been summoned today in the case of Floyd Streitenberger, former Canton detective, on trial for first degree murder, in connection with the death of Don R. Mellett, Canton publisher, here last July.

The first venire of sixty names was exhausted late Monday, with eleven tentative jurors seated—seven men and four women. The defense had used but three of its sixteen peremptory challenges however, and the state had used none of its four.

The jury box was tentatively filled for the first time Monday afternoon, but when Presiding Judge Frank M. Clevenger called on the defense for the first peremptory challenge, Mrs. Susan Rice, housewife of East Sparta, second tentative juror chosen, was excused.

Precautions Taken To Prevent Woman From Suicide
—Gray Eats Good Breakfast And Seeks
Solace In Prayers

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y., May 10.—Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder who, with her lover, Henry Judd Gray, is to be sentenced next Monday to death in the electric chair, was today in a state of collapse.

The woman who had been called the "icy blonde" because of her cold self-possession for days in court lay semi-conscious in her cell in Queens County Jail, suffering from the effects of a hysterical spasm that was diagnosed by physicians as an epileptic fit.

She broke down completely last night when a jury returned verdicts of guilty against her and Gray for the murder of her husband, Albert Snyder, in her home on March 20. "Oh, my God!—I never thought that followed her conviction. Phys. I'd get this!" she cried.

So depressed has Mrs. Snyder become that officials at the jail took precautions against a possible suicide attempt. Dr. Charles Mulligan, who examined the condemned woman today, said her condition is "bordering on hysterical tremors." Sedatives were administered to her.

She slept little last night, tossing restlessly upon her cot. She sobbed almost ceaselessly and was unable to eat breakfast. Gray in his cell, was cheerful. He ate a good breakfast and spent the forenoon writing letters.

Gray, prayer book in hand, accepted the verdict stoically. Mrs. Snyder was kept under the influence of morphine and chloral this morning to prevent a repetition of the emotional outbreak upon the case.

HOW GRAY-SNYDER LOVE PACT MOVED TO CLIMAX

The progress of the Snyder-Gray affair, traced from its beginnings to its climax in Queen's County courthouse, is as follows: Summer of 1925—Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder and Henry Judd Gray began intimacy which ended in murder of Albert Snyder.

Week of March 13, 1927—Snyder said by mother-in-law to have threatened wife with hammer.

March 17, 1927—Gray spoke with Mrs. Snyder by telephone from Syracuse.

March 19—Gray left Syracuse by fast train and went to the Snyder home in Queen's village.

March 20—Gray and Mrs. Snyder decided early in morning upon the murder of the editor. Deed accomplished as he slept. Police become suspicious and arrest Mrs. Snyder, Gray having returned to Syracuse.

March 21—Mrs. Snyder breaks down and confesses, implicating Gray. Gray is arrested in Syracuse and brought to New York. March 22—Snyder is buried. Gray and Mrs. Snyder are arraigned in Jamaica court. Gray signs confession.

March 23—Defendants are arraigned in Queen's County court and remanded for trial April 11. April 4—Trial postponed until April 18, because of intervention of Holy Week. April 18—On Easter Monday, Mrs. Snyder and Gray appear to stand trial. May 9—Found guilty of first degree murder.

COAST GUARD BEGINS COMBING SEARCH FOR MISSING AIRPLANE

French And British Warships May Join Search—
Hope Dwindles For Safety Of Intrepid
French Aces

NEW YORK, May 10.—A combing search was begun today over the North Atlantic for Capt. Charles Nungesser and Capt. Francois Coli, French airmen who disappeared while trying to make a non-stop flight from Paris to New York.

It has been more than fifty-five hours since the aviator in the "White Bird" took off from Paris early Sunday morning to try to span the Atlantic in a single hop. This morning the men and their plane were still missing, although during the past twenty-four hours Europe and America had been thrilled a half dozen times by false reports that the French machine and its venturesome occupants had been sighted of the American coast at various points.

United States navy coast guard cutters and ocean going tugs are engaged in the hunt over the storm tossed, far bound reaches of the North Atlantic along the steamer line followed by ships in their northern passage to and from European ports.

It is understood that French warships and possibly British warcraft will join the search, thus making a great international quest for some vestige of the missing airplane.

Disappearance of the Nungesser plane makes the second recent tragedy on trans-Atlantic flights.

Capt. Saint-Roman, another French aviator, who tried to fly from the African coast to the South American mainland, dropped somewhere during the flight and he has been missing since last Thursday.

Chiefly by reason of bad weather off the American coast hope has dwindled for the safety of Nungesser and his companion.

Thick mist and high winds have prevailed off the coast of the Canadian maritime provinces in the path of the route that Nungesser planned to pursue. The thick weather added a double element of danger. Even if the machine dropped into the Atlantic and remained afloat it would be difficult for searchers to see it through the murk.

Before leaving Paris Nungesser spoke of the possibility of mishap that would force him down into the ocean. He said this contingency did not alarm him because he believed the plane would float for two or three days and he hoped that, if accident overtook him, he would be picked up by a passing ship.

Nungesser carried only fuel to keep his plane in flight when he left Paris and experts pointed out, that he was probably compelled to use more petrol than he had counted on because of the adverse winds encountered in mid-Atlantic.

Aviation experts did not overlook one possibility. They pointed out that Nungesser and his companion might have been picked up by a fishing boat off the Grand Banks and under such circumstances would be unable to communicate with land because of the lack of radio facilities.

Throughout the night radio stations along the United States and Canadian coasts kept in touch with steamships hoping to get some word of the missing airmen.

Four powerful searchlights at Sandy Hook—the entrance to New York harbor—kept their beams swinging restlessly through the foggy air all night as a beacon. There was little hope that Nungesser could reach that far on his limited supply of petrol, but the precaution was undertaken as a sort of "last resort" measure.

The Bellanca Monoplane Columbus in which Lloyd W. Bertram and Clarence D. Chamberlin plan a non-stop flight to Paris is all it has been so bad the past thirty six hours that they are postponing their departure. There is a possible chance, however, that they may hop off tomorrow morning.

PARIS, May 10.—Hope for Capt. Charles Nungesser, France's foremost aviator, died hard and slowly today.

National gloom over the tragic disappearance of Capt. Nungesser and his fellow aviator, Capt. Francois Coli, at sea was deepened when officials of the air ministry admitted that they had received no word up to 10 o'clock upon which hope might be based.

France will send war craft to comb the north Atlantic steamer lane which is believed to have been the route taken by Nungesser when he set out to span the Atlantic in a single jump.

OPIUM VALUED AT $100,000 SEIZED

BOSTON, May 10.—Opium valued at $100,000 was seized and three Chinese were arrested early today when an attempt was made to unload the drug from the Far East steamer, Malaysian Prince.

The Chinese, it was learned, attempted to bribe federal officials to allow the landing of the opium.

OHIO LEGISLATURE ATTEMPTS TO AGREE ON DEFICIT REMEDY

Direct State Tax Levy
May Be One Solution
Said

COLUMBUS, O., May 10.—Leaders of the Ohio legislature this morning resumed their efforts to agree upon a legislative program designed to wipe out the deficit in the state's general revenue fund.

Indications early today were that the program might provide for a direct state tax levy of six-tenths of one mill; increasing the tax levied on foreign insurance companies operating in Ohio; boosting the tax levied upon wholesalers and jobbers dealing in cigarettes, and cutting about $3,000,000 out of the general appropriations bill which, as it passed the legislature, provided originally for the expenditure of approximately $53,500,000 of state funds during the 18-months' fiscal period beginning July 1, next.

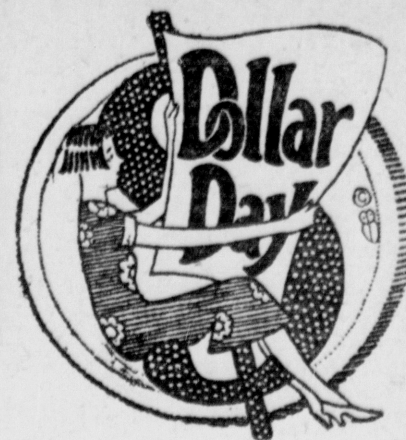

If the tentative plan is adopted, legislators said, half of the six-tenths direct state tax levy would be collected next December and the other half in June, next year. They estimated that this levy would raise approximately $8,200,000.

By boosting the tax rate on foreign insurance concerns, it was proposed to raise an additional $1,000,000 a year. A similar amount of revenue, it was estimated, would be added by increasing the tax levied on jobbers and wholesale dealers in cigarettes.

This proposed program, it was claimed would add approximately $10,000,000 during the coming year to the state's revenues and would completely wipe out the deficit in the state treasury.

ARTHUR BUCKLE'S BRINGS SUIT FOR $4,530 AGAINST AUTOISTS

Arthur Buckles, 71, S. King St., paper hanger, has begun suit in Common Pleas Court against Ernest Bull, R. R. 5, and Mrs. Maud Dixon, 106 Rogers St., for $4,350 damages, based on alleged permanent injuries received in an auto accident on King St., March 24.

Buckles was pushing a push cart north on King St., enroute to work, and was on his extreme right-hand side, when struck by an auto driven by Mrs. Dixon after it had collided with a car driven by Harold Bull, 15, son of the defendant, Ernest Bull, according to the petition.

The petition declares Mrs. Dixon was driving west on Union St. and Bull was operating a truck south on King St. Mrs. Dixon, it is charged, did not slacken the speed of the car in approaching the intersection, in defiance of a "slow" sign, a police regulation.

Plaintiff says he did not know whether it was his intention to continue her course west on Union or to turn south on King, but in any event she turned the car south, and Bull's car, trying to pass it on the right side, instead crashed into the auto and the front wheels vaulted to the running board.

Mrs. Dixon came practically to a stop and in doing so, steered the car diagonally across the street so as to knock Buckles down, run over him and continue into a private yard on the east side of the street, the petition sets forth.

Buckles, according to the petition, sustained two broken ribs, a bruised and injured about the head, his back was sprained and both ankles were bruised and injured, confining him to bed for five weeks, and resulting in permanent injuries.

Plaintiff claims he incurred $30 medical expense, and that he is unable to continue his employment as a paper hanger, which produced an income of about $600. He was damaged to the extent of $1,500 by loss of time and for pain and suffering already caused and $3,000 additionally because of permanent injuries, he sets forth.

Attorney F. L. Johnson represents Buckles.

FOUR PRISONERS IN COUNTY JAIL GIVEN FREEDOM BY COURT

Four prisoners in the Greene County Jail, serving sentences in default of payment of fines and costs for violation of the prohibition laws, are subject to release under the indigent debtor law.

The four convicted liquor law violators, who are the first in Greene County to take advantage of the recent state supreme court ruling, are: Fred Harris, 24, colored, 934 Brewster St., Detroit, Mich.; Bennie Lewis, 43, colored, 623 E. Church St.; Agnew White, 26, colored, 616 E. Second St.; and Earl Cline, 21, 103 Bellbrook Ave.

The decision, in effect, holds that to imprison a man for non-payment of a fine is in fact imprisonment for debt in violation of constitutional provisions, if the prisoner is insolvent and unable to pay the fine. Under the insolvent debtor's law they could not be held longer than sixty days.

The four obtained certificates of insolvency from the insolvency commissioner April 7, and were granted temporary releases without bond pending a final hearing before Judge Wright, who has added his affirmation to the commissioner's order.

"TOYS" AND INVENTIONS

It was not so long ago in the annals of science that a technical journal published an article about a Mr. Edison, an American, who had invented an electric lamp. The article described the invention as "a toy lamp" and assured the owners of gas and oil wells and candle works that illumination by electricity would never come.

Another of these "toys" is the telephone. Many still living were among those early scoffers who only fifty years ago laughed at the prediction that men would some day talk to each other through a strand of wire. Even after the first telephone conversation the public looked upon the device as a toy for the amusement of Alexander Graham Bell and other scientists.

And now some authorities regard the television as no more than a toy with which electrical engineers may amuse themselves. Some of its sponsors make no promises that it will become a part of the everyday life of this present and living generation. But the public, guided by past experience, has assumed an attitude of watchful waiting. The non-scientific citizen has that much confidence in the present day scientist he believes anything is possible.

Television may not write a great new page in the social and industrial history of the world, but it will be well for doubting prophets to beware. Their cue should be the progress already made with this remarkable device, the development of radio and long-distance telephoning, and the practical use now being made of the invention by which photographs are transmitted across continents and oceans by telegraph.

BABY CARS

There isn't much demand for baby buggies any more, says a furniture dealer. It used to be that every furniture store had to carry a line of such vehicles, ranging in price all the way up to $150 apiece. Every baby just naturally had to have a buggy.

Now there is only an occasional call for one, few are kept in stock, and parents are unwilling to pay the old prices, the limit being about $50.

It isn't so safe and easy to wheel buggies around as it used to be, with autos whirling around every corner and stop-and-go signs at the crossways. Also the babies' taste has changed. Or else the mothers have changed it for them.

The baby now has to take its airing in a motor car. That pleases baby and mother both, and father himself doesn't seem to mind much. It's surprising how much this infantile demand has to do with the present market for automobiles.

Little Old New York

NEW YORK, May 16.—Antiquaries are fancy even if the place dealers have decided to "go wild."

They've decided in what they call the Decorative Art League, adopted a new, shiny code of ethics, and are asking the collectors of cobwebs and fractured furniture to let bygones be bygones and start all over again.

Henceforth if you step into one of these Sap Salons and purchase a Louis Quinze ice cream freezer that subsequently turns out to be an Etruscan cuckoo clock, you may go back to the Food Bazaar and get redress, satisfaction, vindication and your money.

The "You-Can't-Win" posters plastered over the city by the police a year or so ago for the cultivation and admonition of the denizens of the underworld, are beginning to bear fruit.

Shoot an arrow in the general direction of Hell's Kitchen and it sometimes drops with a dull, sickening thud on someone's front step on Park Ave.

Walking west on Fifty-ninth St. from Columbus circle, the massive front of the Paulist church is hidden by the Ninth Ave. elevated station. All that is visible of the structure are the turrets, the Cross and part of the roof.

Back of the church, an office building has been erected and a dentist on one of the upper floors has hung out a sign that from a distance looks as if it were part of the church. First the Cross, then the turrets, and finally the black-tinted announcement, "We Specialize in Gold Crowns."

And probably both had a rotten time!

far enough to make your conscience heckle you, wouldn't you have had more fun by doing either one thing or the other?

Many Minds SIGNIFICANT SAYINGS OF THE DAY

"I am sorry that women have been brought into the House of Commons. I am still more sorry that women have been admitted to juries. The plain fact is that men and women cannot be brought together in association without either attracting one another or irritating one another."—Lord Hugh Cecil.

"The danger of suggestion, while its results have always been realized, is rendered much more acute by the coming of the tabloid newspaper which reaches strata of population which never read newspapers in former generations. The power is great, especially where persons of subnormal intelligence are concerned. Accidents which they read of crime impress them to a greater extent than their more intelligent brothers and the flood of crime news which flows from the modern press gives sinister inclinations to minds that would otherwise be occupied with very harmless interests."—Report of the New York state crime commission.

"Whether a man or a woman has had any higher education or not he can be both informed and intelligent. How? Books! Information comes largely from books, and intelligence is aided by good books. Education of the widest sort can hardly be achieved apart from books."—Charles Francis Potter.

"A democracy which refuses to do political thinking is digging its own grave, and particularly is this true when in the midst of a pervading prosperity and surface quiescence, deep and fundamental forces are at work which, possibly sooner than we think, may find expression in political acts and facts which will be constructive or destructive, progressive or retrogressive, according as the people shape and direct them."—Gov. A. C. Ritchie, Maryland.

"Some of you may be astonished at the reflection you see in the mirror—all facial muscles in action—but you must persevere and practice relaxation frequently, also try to cultivate a happy thought habit and with patience you should be able to overcome this detriment to your beauty."

"One of the most pronounced proofs that you talk the way you shouldn't is the expression lines in your face. Sit down before your dressing table mirror, which I hope is in a good light, and examine your face carefully. If you are getting pronounced nose to mouth lines, deep forehead creases or a suggestion of vertical lines between your eyes or frown lines at each side of them, then you should by all means carry on a little test conversation with yourself in the mirror and see whether your whole face is in action while you are talking. If it is, begin at once to try to curb some of this activity."

First of all, relax, then proceed to carry on a conversation with yourself, watching your reflection in the mirror as you talk. Talk easily, more slowly than usual, and more calmly about something pleasant, recanting a happy experience and trying for repose. Get

Keeping HEALTHY by Dr. A.F. Currier

INDICANURIA

This condition is an exceedingly common one and as it is sometimes a matter of great importance it is a good plan to know something about it. The term implies that indican is present in the urine. Now indican can always be found in the urine if the test used is sufficiently delicate and when it is present in considerable quantity it becomes a matter of decided significance.

Indican is a dark blue substance resembling indigo and is a product of indol which is formed by the decomposition of proteins in the intestine. Indol is absorbed into the blood and oxidized and when combined with sulphur it becomes indoxyl sulphate which is the chemical expression for indican.

It is always due to putrefactive changes with fermentation resulting from bacterial action and more frequently in proteins derived from animal matter like meat, fish and eggs than from vegetable products.

It is separated from the blood in the kidneys and so becomes a constituent of the urine.

When it is absorbed in abundance its poisonous action is indicated by headache, irritability, insomnia and other symptoms which show interference with the blood and nerves and it is thought by some to have an influence in producing arteriosclerosis and chronic inflammation of the kidneys.

It is quite possible that the symptoms mentioned are not due to indican alone for other poisons are found with it when decomposition in the intestines takes place and these are also absorbed into the blood stream.

It is one of the products developed in connection with chronic constipation, or obstruction from any cause in the small intestine, or from suppurative, with decomposition of pus in any portion of the body.

Its formation is encouraged in those who eat large quantities of meat or eggs or who commit excess of diet in many ways, in those who do not take sufficient exercise, whose habits are sedentary, whose digestive secretions are insufficient and who are subject to nervous troubles of various kinds. Indican is also excessive in many of those who suffer from liver diseases, super-acidity of the stomach and ulcer of the stomach and duodenum.

Those who have epilepsy and those who have inflammation of the bladder are also sufferers in many instances from indicanuria.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS S. E. T.: 1. Would there be any bad effect from taking two tablespoonfuls of parafine oil daily for sixty days? 2. I have been using a patent hair tonic for scaly dandruff on my scalp, but my hair seems to be getting thinner. What would you think of it? Answer—1. I suppose you mean mineral oil. This is not absorbed, but passes through the intestine and is discharged unchanged. If you are using a good preparation it ought not to do you any harm. Many people use it for constipation for an indefinite period without out harm and with good result. 2. If your hair continues to come out it would seem to me that the preparation is not helping you. Why not try something else.

Mrs. W. L.: Please tell me when I can do for constipation from which I have suffered five years. My ten-month-old baby is also very constipated, and each of us has to take a laxative every night.

Answer—For these obstinate cases of constipation there is nothing much better, that I know of, than mineral oil. There are several good brands of it which may be obtained at any first-class drug store, and the beauty of it is it can usually be taken for an indefinite period or as long as it may be required, without harm. It is not absorbed from the intestines, but simply loosens up the intestinal contents and gives them a push.

ANTIOCH COLLEGE BOARD ADOPTS NEW PLAN

AUTONOMOUS STUDY SYSTEM IS RADICAL SCHOOL DEPARTURE

Taking one of the most progressive steps in the history of college education, the Antioch College board of trustees, at its annual meeting in the college offices Monday afternoon, approved the adoption of the autonomous plan of study for the Yellow Springs Institution.

The new plan, providing for a reduction in class room work and putting the student almost entirely upon his own initiative, will be put into effect with the opening of the first semester of the 1927-28 college year in September, according to President Arthur E. Morgan.

The student, under the latest and more advanced system of education, is not required to attend regular classes and the daily recitations are abandoned. He is permitted to handle the subjects alone as long as possible before conferring with faculty members for any assistance and to get the instructor's point of view.

The plan has been worked out on a smaller scale at the college and after almost five years of experimentation, college officials feel the time is opportune to place the system on a more advanced scale.

Students will submit to regular examinations every five weeks and the trustees also approved adoption of a comprehensive examination for students at the end of the college course, covering all subjects studied. This detailed examination requires a thorough knowledge of all work taken up while at college. The course is normally for six years but a majority of students have been able to complete it in five years, President Morgan says.

A full program of work will be mapped out for next year.

The trustees received and approved the contemplated budget for next year.

Work of the past year was also thoroughly reviewed by the board, which found the co-operative plan of study at the college is progressing satisfactorily. Favorable progress was reported for the art bronze foundry, which makes bronze busts for sculptors, for the Antioch Press, which is now printing "Antioch Notes" and other college publications, and for the shoe research project.

Announcement was made by President Morgan at the meeting that the purchase price of $17,500 for Antioch Glen, to which the college has had title for some time, has been donated by Mrs. Armstrong, Erie, Pa. The gift includes about 165 acres of land.

Strengthening the college faculty, the trustees also approved four new department heads. They are: Robert Hiller, of the chemistry department; Dr. Liddle, of the department of English; Dr. Mathieson, of the department of psychology; and Dr. Horace English, also of the department of psychology, who resigned two years ago to become attached to the department of psychology at Wesleyan University in Connecticut. He was formerly professor at Antioch in charge of this department.

The 1927 graduating class of the college of fifty-three students, for whom commencement exercises will be held next month, was approved at the meeting.

It was disclosed that there were about 400 contributors to the college during the year. Of this number, the largest gift announced at the meeting, was made by Allen Balch of California, of $10,000 each year for general school purposes. Mr. Balch is not connected in any way with the institution but is deeply interested in the work, it is said.

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. BERTHA GERLAUGH; BURIAL WEDNESDAY

Mrs. Bertha A. Gerlaugh, 66, widow of John A. Gerlaugh, and a former resident of Greene County, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Samuel Kundert, 1234 Huffman Ave., Dayton, Monday morning at 11:20. Mrs. Gerlaugh was born and reared at New Haven, but soon after her marriage in 1885 came to Greene County, and lived on a farm near Alex Chapel in Beavercreek Township until Chicago, Ill. — The motor public was amazed recently when a Ford equipped with the new Blanche Thermomatic Control made 41.8 miles on one gallon of gas in an Official Public Test; 40 miles per gallon in another test. Average in 200,000 tests 32 miles per gallon, breaking world's record. The Blanche Control is entirely automatic and saves its small cost every few weeks as it is guaranteed to start cold motor instantly in wintry weather, remove and prevent carbon, save fuel oil and increase speed, pep, and power. Thermomatic Control used on Cadillac and DeSoto Light under Blanche License—another sure proof of merit. The inventors want agents everywhere and will send one Control guaranteed. 1917, when she and her husband moved to Dayton.

For many years Mrs. Gerlaugh was prominently identified with the work of the W. C. T. U. in Greene and Montgomery Counties. She served for a time as treasurer of the Montgomery County branch. She was interested in religious and educational work as well and in 1924 went abroad, attending the world's Sunday School convention at Glasgow, and touring the continent.

She was a member of the Emerson Literary Club of Dayton. She was an official organizer of the Miami Conference missionary branch of the United Brethren Church, having served in that capacity for nine years. During that time she organized eighteen missionary societies in local churches of the conference, eight of them for women and ten for girls. She was one of the first residents of the branch, and a pioneer in organizing young women's work. She was a member of the East Dayton U. B. Church and held many official positions in the church.

Mrs. Gerlaugh is survived by her daughter, Mrs. Kundert, two brothers, L. A. Scott of Shandon, O. and A. J. Scott of New Haven, and a sister, Mrs. Azilia Detweiler of Uniontown, Pa.

Funeral services will be conducted at the East Dayton U. B. Church Wednesday at 2 o'clock, and the body will lie in state at the church from 11 o'clock.

ADMITS AUTO THEFT FOLLOWING ARREST NEAR XENIA MONDAY

Ralph Conners, arrested by Kenneth C. Barr, county road patrolman, on the Jasper Pike Monday afternoon, confessed to Sheriff Ohmer Tate the theft of a Ford coupe from a man named Sweltzer, Mt. Healthy, O., last Sunday.

The officer noticed the unoccupied car parked along the road, and investigating, found Conners asleep in a barn nearby.

Questioned by the sheriff, Conners originally claimed to have purchased the car and that he procured license plates at Eaton, O. He said he was en route to Chicago, Ill.

Sheriff Tate traced the license plates through the auto club at Cincinnati and found they were issued to the Mt. Healthy resident. He communicated with the mayor of that city and it developed the car had been stolen last Sunday. Conners then admitted the theft. He will face a probable charge of grand larceny and will be prosecuted in Cincinnati.

"Love Bound"

JOHNSON FEATURES INC. 1926

READ THIS FIRST:

SYLVIA STARR has been engaged to RANDALL PHELPS for a year when he asks her to free him, because he's fallen love with her chum, FAY SHIRLEY.

Heartbroken, Sylvia gives him up, much to the satisfaction of her Aunt Agony who brought her up. Aunt Agony says that Ranny will never be true to any woman for very long, and she urges Sylvia to accept PETER WILK, a wealthy bachelor who adores her.

Aunt Agony's opinion of Ranny seems to be correct, for suddenly he drops Fay and marries Sylvia. After all, but their married life is not happy. For Ranny hates to be tied down, and returns to his bachelor habits of flirting with every girl he meets, and having serious love affairs with three or four women, and drinks, and Sylvia has to give piano lessons to keep things going in their tiny flat, The Nest.

JUNIOR, the first baby dies, and Sylvia has a nervous breakdown and refuses to leave Aunt Agony's house to stay here and give Ranny a chance to think things over and come to his senses. Then, in the middle of the night, she regrets leaving him and goes back home, to find him in bed. He tells her he isn't sure that he ever wants to come back to her, and advises her to go back to her baby for the night. The next morning at 9, Aunt Agony wakes her to tell her that he is on his way to see her. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER LV.

HE was coming! That surely must mean that the storm had blown over. He was coming to take her home! He was coming to explain how he had happened to have Babs Delano in his arms last night. Sylvia was sure of it. She could have laughed out loud for sheer relief. Her spirits rose like a lark at break of day.

Under Aunt Agony's watching eyes, her face flushed and bloomed like a rose, with her sudden happiness. Her eyes danced like blue-black water in the sun. One hand went to her breast, where her heart was throbbing under her soft muslin nightgown, as only the thought of Ranny could make it throb.

"Well, I'd better hop out of this bed and get dressed," she cried. "Is there some fresh coffee? Ranny likes it strong, and I'll bustle down and make him some French toast."

She jumped up from the bed, and standing on her bare toes, she hugged Aunt Agony and kissed her leathery cheek. Then she ran into the bathroom and turned on the water in the old tin tub.

While it was filling she dashed back into the bedroom, and took a fresh dress out of her bag. It was a clean cotton thing but it was the clean, larkspur blue that Ranny loved. She laid it on the bed, and began to spray perfume on it, from a bottle that Fay had given her for Christmas. She sprayed some more of it on her dark, cloudy hair.

Aunt Agony took it all in with grim eyes. "Fixing yourself all up for him, aren't you?" she asked with sharp eyes. "Last night you were going to leave him and now you're ready to welcome him with open arms. The way he winds you around his little finger does beat all."

Then she began to repeat a proverb, as she often did when she ran out of words of her own. This one was from the Bible:

"Three things are too wonderful for me," she quoted, "the way of an eagle in the air, the way of a ship on the sea and the way of a man with a maid."

Having said this, she raised her eyebrows, her chin and her nose, and marched out of the room, lifting her feet like a Prussian soldier doing the goose-step.

When Sylvia followed her down, some 10 minutes later, she found her sitting at the breakfast table, with one eye on the morning paper and the other on the doings of Bleak street, outside the window.

"Fay just went into her mother's house," she said, nodding in the direction of the Shirley's big house across the road. "My, but she's getting thin, isn't she? And that husband of hers is so fat he can hardly waddle."

Sylvia peeped into the kitchen. The tin of coffee and a loaf of bread and some butter stood on the kitchen table. But Aunt Agony hadn't lifted a finger toward getting Ranny a bite of breakfast.

"There's everything you need on the kitchen table," she said to Sylvia, without looking at her. "If you want to cook a meal for that good-for-nothing you can, but I won't, and I'm right here to tell you so. He ought to be tarred and feathered and ridden out of town on a pike, that one. He's just as bad as he can be."

Sylvia came back to the table for a minute. "Now, Aunt Agony, if you say another word against Ranny, I'll walk out of the house," she warned her. "I told you what happened last night. I should have known that Ranny didn't mean anything by it. 'Way down deep in his heart, he doesn't care for anyone but me, and I ought to remember that better than I do. I ought to trust him.'"

"Boh!" Aunt Agony broke in, her upper lip twitching with anger. "You ought to trust him! You ought to have him watched by a detective for a while. Then you wouldn't trust him as much as you do now. Suddenly, as if she had said too much already, and went on reading.

But as Sylvia measured coffee into the pot, and mixed up the milk and eggs for the French toast, she wondered what Aunt Agony had meant. Were there things about Ranny that he kept hidden from her? Things that Aunt Agony had found out? Could that be possible?

Oh, no! She wouldn't let doubts of Ranny creep into her mind. She shook them out of it, as she might have shaken dust flakes from a spotted handkerchief.

When the coffee was made, she put it on a tray and carried it into the dining room. The French toast went into the oven to keep hot.

While she was upstairs packing up her bags, and laying the baby's blanket and bonnet on the bed, Ranny rang the front door bell. "I'll let him in," she called eagerly to Aunt Agony, and ran down the stairs. She might have saved her breath. For Aunt Agony had made no move to go to the door. She was so concerned, Ranny might have stood there forever, before she let him in.

"Breakfast's all ready for you, Mr. Man," Sylvia cried, fairly shining with excitement and welcome, as she lunged the door wide open to him.

Then something in his face stopped her. He was looking through the door of the dining room at the coffee tray she had made ready for him, and then at Aunt Agony, sitting like a carved statue on the other side of the table.

"Can't we go somewhere, so I can talk to you?" he asked, turning his cold eyes to Sylvia. The look in them told her that he hadn't come here to take her home with him.

With a dreadful sinking of her heart she nodded the door that led into Aunt Agony's "best parlor," and he followed her in and sat down near the window.

He jerked his head back defiantly and told her what he had come for. "I want you to divorce me," he said shortly.

"Divorce?" she repeated the word slowly, as if she had never heard it before, and couldn't imagine what it meant. "Divorce? You want a divorce?"

Ranny nodded. "I said so," he answered, with that smile of his, and he took out a cigarette.

She tried to think of something to say to him, but all she could see was Babs Delano standing in his arms, under the living room lamp last night.

"You want to marry Babs?" she said to him, and his silence was all the answer she needed to that question. She knew that he did.

He sat waiting for her decision, every now and then flicking his ash off onto the floor of Aunt Agony's spotless room.

From sheer force of habit, Sylvia found herself brushing them into the palm of her hand, and carrying them to the fire place.

Babs wouldn't do things like that for him, she said daily to herself. Babs wouldn't lay out his clean clothes every morning, and spread his bath-mat on the floor beside the tub. Babs wouldn't darn his socks, and steam his ties and press his trousers. Babs wouldn't forgive him when he came back to her from the love affairs that he was always having.

Sylvia knew that no woman in the world but herself loved Ranny as she loved him. No woman would take care of him as she did. No woman would give up everything worth while for him, as she had. Why, he was her man! He belonged to her. He belonged, not to Babs Delano, but to her. No matter what he did, he would always belong to her.

"No," she said, looking straight into his eyes. "No, I won't divorce you." Her tone was as calm as a summer sea at sunrise. "There's no use in asking me to, because I won't."

She could see that she had staggered him. He gave a start, and looked at her as if he doubted what he had heard.

So she said it again, shaking her head. "I'll never divorce you. This—this crush of yours on Babs won't last long. Then you'll come back to me, just as you always have."

He got up, brushing the gray ash lightly from his coat and trousers. His smile was a sneer, now.

"You may not divorce me," he said, brutally, "but don't kid yourself that I'm ever going to come back to you. I wouldn't live with you if you were the last woman on earth."

He was gone then, shutting the door behind him so violently that all the family portraits shook and trembled against the old-fashioned wall paper of the room.

Dry-eyed, but quivering from head to foot, Sylvia stood where he had left her, and watched him go down the front walk to his car. When he was out of sight she went back to the dining room.

Only four or five minutes had passed since he had rung the door bell, and she had rushed to let him in. Aunt Agony was still reading an article by Lady Cathcart, on the front page of her newspaper.

But Sylvia felt as if a hundred years had passed over her head, in that five minutes. She felt old and broken and very, very tired.

She sagged against the door. "Aunt Agony, I'm—I'm sick. I guess," she said in a voice that wasn't like her own. "Would you

AND OH! WHAT FUN
"I have the best plans for our pirate feast!" cried Betty Ann, bursting into the little carpenter shop, where Patsy and the three boys were busy working on the invitations and the treasure hunt scroll for their party.
The Ritzies were going to entertain the neighborhood boys and girls with a pirate party and tell them all about their newly-organized club. Their plans were well under way when Betty Ann, the youngest Ritzie, came dashing in to the little carpenter shop (which served as headquarters for the club, with plans for the pirate feast.
"If Marty can cut some small wooden slabs here in his shop, we will serve the food on them in true pirate fashion," she said. "We will use mugs for milk and

barn and back lawn looked like a pretty dangerous place for peaceful people to venture. Daggers, black mustaches and high-topped boots were there aplenty.
When all had assembled, Captain Hank (which, of course, was Marty in disguise), announced that it was a peaceful mission that had called them together. His crew had heard of some booty, but had been unable to trace it down. They were willing to share the spoils if their pirate friends could find the buried treasure. Marty then presented the visiting pirates with the map which he and the twins had carefully worked out the day before.
This started the treasure hunt, with the five members looking on from the upper deck (the loft window). When the pirate chest was at last unearthed (it was really Patsy's old doll trunk filled with wooden spoons and kitchen knives and forks for utensils.

"Mother is going to cook an extra amount of mashed potatoes for lunch and keep them steaming hot in a double boiler until we are ready to serve. These and the baked beans we will bring out on the slabs of wood. We can take up a collection for cookies and the feast will be complete."
"Three cheers for Betty Ann, the food queen!" shouted Marty, and they all joined in the chorus.
With the treasure hunt planned, the invitations written and the food problem solved, there was little else to do except get the pirate costumes together. Atties was ransacked for bright-colored ties to be used as sashes, and old felt hats that could be turned up in front in real pirate fashion.
Ho! Ho! for the Treasure Marty, as leader of the pirates, wore a wide ribbon sash across his chest that told in red letters that he was Snarling Captain Hank.
The day of the party they were indeed a hard-looking crew. When the guests started to arrive, the

STATE UNIVERSITY MAY KEEP STUDENTS FROM USING AUTOS

COLUMBUS, O., May 10.—Ohio State University students will be "out of luck" if President George W. Rightmire takes drastic action on the traffic situation and forbids automobiles to be driven on the campus.

For unlike Illinois and Princeton, where autos have been banned, facilities for roller skating to school are not exactly first rate.

When students were forbidden to drive cars to school at Illinois and likewise at Princeton, the undaunted drivers took to the roller skates and glided to school on the smooth streets and sidewalks.

Owing to aged and cracked asphalt streets, the cobblestone sidewalks and cinder paths which prevail on the campus, it is highly probable that Ohio State's will not be able to fall back on the childhood means of transportation. Prexy Rightmire has refused to make a statement regarding his action on the matter but his decisions in the weekly traffic court have been trending toward some definite change in the traffic laws. Eight students, on charges of breaking the speed or parking rules set by the university, were recently given two weeks suspension from the institution by Rightmire.

The traffic conditions have he promises expellation from the university to violators who become so acute that the Prexy come constant visitors in the weekly court.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED:

Philip Wynne Tracy IV brings Natalie Jones to his house in the car his mother has just given him and tells her they are going to Arrowhead Inn. He stays very late and when he does come home tells his mother that he has proposed to Natalie and hopes to marry her before leaving for college.

Mr. Jones, who is the Tracy's milkman, objects to Philip quite as much as Mrs. Tracy objects to Natalie.

Philip's mother unconsciously interests her son in a woman who is coming to visit her and will stay for the party she is going to give for him. Without his mother's knowledge Phil plans that Natalie shall come to the party with Rodney Maxwell and then goes to meet his mother's friend, Mrs. Hilliard, at the train. She flirts with him as though he were a grown man. He takes her to luncheon and suddenly finds that he is in love with her—a woman much older than himself.

In the meantime Rodney takes Phil's message to Natalie and she does not believe it comes from his mother.

During their first dinner together at his mother's table, Lyra Hilliard and Philip secretly hold hands. Here the story further unfolds—

CHAPTER XI

LYRA MAKES COMPARISONS

From the evening of that dinner Philip Wynne Tracy IV only lived for the touch of Lyra Hilliard's beautiful hands—only saw the shifting light that turned her brilliant eyes from gold to black—only heard the sounds of a tender, caressing voice speaking his name—everything else was forgotten. He counted the days by the minutes that he had passed by her side.

After the invitations had been sent out, his friends, being well bred young people, called upon his mother and his mother's friend. That is, all of them called except Natalie.

One evening six of them dropped in at the same time and he proposed that they should take up a rug and dance to the victrola.

This was hailed with great joy by every one, the young people being a little shy in the presence of Mrs. Hilliard.

Naturally the couples first paired off together as they had come, and to his great delight his mother said: "Son, ask Lyra to dance—she still likes it."

He stood before her and she lifted her eyes to his. He caught again that wistful childish expression he had surprised in her the first day. Oh, how could he comfort her?

For a moment her eyes wandered about the floor where the twinkling feet of three couples were already dancing, and then, as she slowly came into his arms, she whispered: "Don't ever forget, dear Philip, that I'm absolutely helpless in this world but youth. Love it, and please it, keep it as long as you can, for afterward—there can be nothing but regret."

Philip could not answer. He could only sense that, light as thistle down, he was holding the woman in his arms, who made all the other women shadows.
